ART EXHIBITION AT THE STATE CAPITOL

This is Native Art

NOVEMBER 2024 – FEBRUARY 2025

This is Native Art, curated by artist Danielle SeeWalker, brings together more than 35 practicing Native American artists from across the United States, each exploring various aesthetics and compositions while challenging the narrative of what Native American art is and what is expected to be. Their powerful expressions demonstrate diversity while weaving a shared view of Indigenous knowledge. As contemporary Native American art gains an increase of visibility across the country, this exhibition charts a glimpse into the often-untold stories of Native America and the significance of affirming Native modernism.

Artists with work on view throughout the State Capitol include: Shawn Ahkeah, Zander Arizona, Jason Barnes, Carlin Bear Don't Walk, Dante Biss-Grayson, Winter E.R. Brown, Jessica Clark, Laney Cully, Ishkoten Dougi, Garrett Etsitty, John Gritts, Heath Johnston, Brent Learned, Savannah LeCornu, George Levi, Jaylee Lowe, Paul Lucero, Kristina Maldonado Bad Hand, Travis Mammedaty, Megan McDermott, Hattie Lee Mendoza, Timothy Tate Nevaquaya, Sarah Ortegon HighWalking, Lorieen Pearson, Kimberly Robertson, Danielle SeeWalker, Rhonda Shelford Jansen, Rande Spruce, Mason St. Peter, Isaiah Stewart, Angelica Trimble-Yanu, Anna Tsouhlarakis, Don Brewer Wakpa, Kate Wheeler, Mar Williams, and Diane Yankton.
