

THE GENDER INSTITUTE FOR TEACHING AND ADVOCACY

ABOUT US Grounded in the values of intersectional feminism, activism, access, community and learning and centered on the power of education towards liberation, the Gender Institute for Teaching and Advocacy (GITA) provides academics, advocacy, and programming opportunities to students. We provide students the skills to challenge the status quo, interrogate the world around them, and teach students how to analyze, communicate and organize so they feel empowered to work against and abolish systems of oppression.

STUDENT OPPORTUNITIES Students can participate in our Applied Queer/Trans/Feminist Labs; propose an episode on a social justice issue for the "GITA Hold of Yourself" podcast; join a student organization like Triota or the Feminist Alliance; or find community in class or through our space, events and programming.

MAJOR/MINOR GITA offers a major in Gender, Women and Sexualities Studies and minors in Gender Studies and Sexualities Studies. Our major identifies and examines systems of power through an intersectional and a transnational (global) lens and gives students the skills to actively make social change. Both minors pair well with any major; the Gender Studies prepares students to examine current social justice issues from a critical perspective; while the Sexualities Studies minor is particularly important for students who hope to work with LGBTQIA populations.

INDUSTRY CAREERS Students can turn their passion for social justice into thriving careers. Our students become policy makers or community advocates in the private sector, or in grassroots organizations.

STUDENT QUOTE "GITA has been a welcoming space and an incredible support to my dreams. They have been an ally to my mission and an accomplice in my journey of strengthening my voice and empowering others by sharing my story. Thank You GITA!"
